OUR CHUKUM

Chukum has its origins in the Mayan culture, it was formerly used to produce stuccos and paintings that served as recovery in areas such as cisterns or outdoor water tanks; as it is a natural waterproofing agent and reduces cracking.

Chukum Tulum is a Yucatecan company that processes and markets this material, providing the necessary inputs to the construction industry, with the mission of promoting ecological and sustainable trade.

We focus on the Chukum product for its sustainable benefits, it has been used for centuries by the Mayans in the construction of housing in the Yucatan Peninsula area. Chukum, or "chuk'um water" is today, more than ever, a notable proposal for contemporary architecture, which manages to fuse style with functionality, giving fresh finishes ideal for the climate of the region.

To create Chukum Tulum stucco, the bark of the tree is boiled twice and then mixed with white cement and limestone, after which it can be used as a finish on concrete walls or even swimming pools.

Chukum bark gives stucco its water-resistant quality, distinguishing it from other types of stucco that must be coated with artificial additives or finishes to achieve the same level of impenetrability. For this reason, it can be used both indoors and outdoors. Chukum bark also naturally gives stucco its earthy, pinkish color, creating warm, rustic atmospheres for Yucatan buildings and homes.

Currently, we have a presence throughout Mexico and the United States. You can request more information through our following contact methods:
